

Love Is Love

I stood there in utter amazement, adoring the overwhelming beauty of this unique creation. The warmth, understanding, and fire it gave off felt unbearable. There was nothing fake or demanding about this magnificent creature. The words taken from my voice because of its very presence. The feeling was so precious it made me feel like I was flying. The beauty, presence, and being overwhelmed was not life but I had felt and seen love.

Love is not just a word, but it is a miniature sun that shines like no other. Love is a desire to feel a feeling no jewel, no house, or car could grant."Love is when what you want is never important. But what the other person needs and wants is always paramount"(Phipps 1). Love is not selfish but forever sharing. Love is very delicate in so many different ways. People cannot touch a button and just automatically love a person, but he/she will know because they will start to feel themselves fall for that person. "Falling in love", is significant because no one rises in love or climbs in love. You fall in love, because something of who you are has to go"(Sadhguru 1). Love is like an ocean, there is a widespread of it and its depth seems unending. Love is the mending of two hearts that were matched together ever since the beginning. The meaning of the word love has so many definitions but do not reveal what love really is. Love is majestic and never fails. Love is not some wicked game that leaves someone on a rollercoaster of emotion, but leaves people flying on the brightest star among the universe. Love is a magnet that attracts more love. There is a garden of life and love is the biggest, beautiful, most sweet smelling flower in that garden. Its fragrance and beauty is hypnotizing to any pure and open heart. Love is so many different good and pure things in the world, but in the end when the smoke clears, love is love.
